

Hideous Kinky

From erotic writer Polly Frost and her husband Ray Sawhill, comes the blue comic soap Sex Scenes, a witty erotic reading and play that has drawn a loyal following in New York. It's tuned into the lusty antics and escapades of Hollywood entertainment executives and lizards. If you're in New York drop by the venues where they read excerpts and act out sexcapades that will make it your sexiest stop for the night. They're read at the bar-cum-cultural venues such as Happy Ending Lounge where one of New York's most sought after erotic writers, Rachel Kramer Bussel, hosts the intimate "In the Flesh Reading Series" (featured in this issue of Escape in the "Our New York" article). Sex Scenes actors including Alex Kosine turned up on stage and played out a sizzling snippet that steamed up an appreciative audience. The focus of the stories is sex, but it's more than merely describing the act as they colour the scenes with comical lines and witty and uncensored dialogue. And this is why we can't tell you exactly what went on, but trust us when we say it's creative and provocative. Check out when Sex Scenes will perform next at www.pollyfrost.com. Or absorb Frost's sizzling comics written with Jess Fink – the very graphic sci-fi erotica, Head 14 series from Eros Comics are out now and more Frost books in the works.

"Sex Scenes" actresses Karen Grenke (below), Sarah Kozinn (above) preparing for a saucy reading; Writer of the erotic soap Polly Frost with actor Alex Kosine at Happy Ending Lounge; Snippets from her very graphic comic "Head"

"Look man. I'm not gay. You're not gay. So this is not a gay thing. It's an athletic thing."

